

Five benefits of using Supporting People

- 1 Allow the new employee to concentrate on the job from day 1 by supporting and helping the family settle in
- 2 Maximise the likelihood of the expat staying the full duration of the contract by supporting the family
- 3 Receive early warning of any problems on the home front before it is too late and the family and specialist expat leaves
- 4 Increase social responsibility within the company by taking the individual seriously
- 5 Strengthen employer branding and attract the most talented employees

Since we started in 2009, we have worked with companies such as British American Tobacco, Haldor Topsøe, Technical University of Denmark, DAKO, LEO Pharma and the French Embassy.

Supporting People works closely with relocation and recruitment companies and is the Danish partner for Dean Foster Associates USA.

The first six months are crucial. If the family settles in, so does the employee A.P. Møller Mærsk taken from "Denmark - a need for talent", 2010.

The majority of international employees feel that their employers are not doing enough to integrate them and their families. International Community, 2009.

You've found the right people

You've moved them to Denmark

Now how do you make sure they perform and stay?

The majority of expats who end a contract early do so because their families fail to settle in the new country. Supporting People specialises in improving the performance of recently arrived expats by helping their spouses and families settle into their new life in Denmark.

Proactive career support for spouses

Our specialist programme has been designed to help spouses continue their career in Denmark. And we have achieved great results - even in the current tough conditions of the labour market in Denmark.

Danish friends of the family

We lay the foundation for a host family programme in which newly arrived expats are matched with a host family or social mentor who welcomes the family to Denmark and provides support in as they settle into their new lives.
